Get Organized

Pressed for Time

Hand-pressed at a family-owned press, these weekly planners make scheduling a snap. Little Otis uses vegetable inks and 100% post-consumer recycled paper to create a date book as up-to-date as you are. $16, littletotus.com

Bowled Over

Mio's flexible 100% wool SoftEwigs are made by Philadelphia artisans, who employ a process that uses less than 1/10th the energy required to produce ceramic models. They're perfect for storing and are recyclable and compostable. $38, mioculture.com

Three-Ring Circus

Made from 100% post-consumer materials, these Russell+Hazel binders come in an array of colors and designs. Finally, an organizer for the eco-minded Trepper Keeper lives in all of us. Large binder, $20, small binder, starting at $14, russellandhazel.com

Storage Unit

Japanese design house Muji uses simple-yet-innovative materials and processes to produce this compact steel utility wagon. By reducing waste and conserving resources, Muji ensures that its footprint (and yours) will be as minimal as its designs. $175, mujiusa.com

Box Popular ▶

Get ready for spring-cleaning with this Paperbox by designer Jos Van Der Meulen. Made from unused billboard posters, it's perfect for stashing magazines, files, laundry, or linens. $28, greenergrassdesign.com
